Feeling and Form in Social Life by Lloyd E. Sandelands

Feeling and Form in Social Life shows how a vigorous and practical science of society can be developed from the insights of philosophy. The book demonstrates how a theory of feeling and form can be applied to the study of social life, and how this theory can help us to understand the role of art in society.

The book explores the ways in which art and social life are interconnected, and how the feeling of life is expressed in art. It argues that art is not simply a reflection of social life, but is actively involved in shaping it.

Feeling and Form in Social Life is a landmark work in aesthetics, and has had a profound influence on the development of social theory. It is a classic text for anyone interested in the relationship between art and society.
